Grant Proposal

Additional Information

What will you accomplish? (Please note short and long term benefits to you, the university, and the students.)

The disciple-leadership model is inherent in the BYU-Idaho learning model, yet as teachers we tend to overlook its vital role in our classrooms. We should also integrate leadership scholarship within our academic scholarship and instruction. I have been developing leadership micro lessons to enhance my course curriculum. The department has asked that I assist regularly again in the English Education methods course. Our students need to recognize that teaching and leading are inseparable; therefore, we need to prepare them to assume leadership roles. Three areas my TA and I are developing include embedded lessons on leadership knowledge, scholarship, and expectations; student-generated leadership journal entries; and teaching-cases through simulation.
